

The diagram illustrates the ground state energy level across a potential barrier. A horizontal line of black dots represents the energy level. In the white regions (left and right), the dots are at a lower, constant energy level. In the gray region (center), the dots are slightly higher, indicating an increase in the ground state energy level due to the potential barrier.